Owned by Dairy Farmers
Since 1919

Cabot Creamery Cooperative has been in operation in Vermont since 1919. Our independent farm families' routines haven't changed much since then – working daily dawn to dusk. Another thing that hasn't changed is our farmer-owners' enduring commitment to producing the finest, most flavorful cheddar on earth.

That's why Cabot has won every major national and international award for cheddar cheese, including "World's Best Cheddar," as well as awards for our flavored and reduced-fat cheddar, and our butter.

endangered species[®] Chocolate

Endangered Species Chocolate uses ethically traded, shade-grown cacao to make all-natural and organic chocolate bars and bite-sized treats. All of our cacao is grown on small family-owned properties that support the habitats and communities in which they exist.

10% of net profits are donated to help support species, habitat and humanity.

At the beginning of 2009, ESC launched the Endangered Species Chocolate Foundation in effort to expand the company's reach on-the-ground in cacao harvesting communities and with nonprofit partners committed to helping endangered species.

There are more than 30 ESC products available to customers who crave all-natural and organic chocolate – and who share a commitment to protect the planet. Choosing Endangered Species Chocolate is one way to support sustainable forest farmland and the species that flourish there.

A neighborhood specialty food and wine market located in Fall Creek Place. We offer an old school butcher shop with locally raised meat, salumi and farmstead cheese. The wine cellar is stocked with an organic and biodynamic wine selection and craft beers, as well as local goods and food staples. Our market is built around the love of phenomenal food, the people who passionately produce it, and the rest of us who can't wait to get our hands on it.
